

Andre Agassi

Former Tennis Champion

On the Court:

Agassi ended a 21-year tennis career with his retirement following the U.S. Open in the summer of 2006. His match against Marcos Baghdatis during the tournament is considered one of the most memorable of all time

In 2005, Agassi won the Mercedes-Benz Cup in Los Angeles, was a finalist at the U.S. Open and at the Master Series Canada in Montreal, and reached the semifinals in tournaments in Miami, Dubai and Rome.

At 35, Agassi was the oldest player to qualify for the circuit-ending championships, the Tennis Masters Cup. The 2005 event in Shanghai marked his 13th appearance in the championships and surpassed Ivan Lendl's record of 12 appearances.

In 2005, Agassi finished in the top 10 for the 16th time in his 20-year career. He was ranked in the top 10 every week except one (Feb. 14).

Agassi has 60 career singles titles including eight Grand Slam titles with an overall singles record of 860-265; he is just seven wins behind John McEnroe for fourth place all-time.

In 1999, Agassi won the French Open, making him the only man to win all four Grand Slam titles and an Olympic gold medal in his career. He also finished that year with the No.1 ranking in the world for the first time.

Agassi was a member of three winning Davis Cup teams (1990, 1992 and 1995).

Career prize money earnings: $30,951,275

Off the Court:

Established The Andre Agassi Charitable Foundation (AACF) in 1994 to provide recreational and educational opportunities for at-risk boys and girls in Las Vegas.

The AACF's annual fund-raiser, the Grand Slam For Children, has raised more than $70 million over the past 12 years, including $9.1 million during the most recent event held in October 2007.

Opened a public charter school in Las Vegas in 2001, the Andre Agassi College Preparatory Academy, in one of the city's most at-risk neighborhoods to improve lives through education and recreation. The school will have its first senior graduating class in the spring of 2009.

Winner of the Arthur Ashe Humanitarian Award in 1995 and 2001.

Since retiring, Agassi has been involved in several business endeavors with his wife, Stefanie Graf, whom he married in 2001.

The couple has two children, Jaden Gil, 6, and Jaz Elle, 4.
