

Melissa Clark-Reynolds

Business Entrepreneur

Melissa Clark-Reynolds was a third generation single mother who has become recognised as a stand-out entrepreneur. Combining business and motherhood with heart and a sense of humour, Melissa will entertain, move and inspire.

Melissa Clark-Reynolds set up a health, safety and Workers Compensation Insurance consultancy which grew over seven years to become part of Fusion (New Zealand's largest private Workers Compensation insurer).

When the New Zealand Labour Government nationalised the business in 2001, Melissa sold her shares to Southern Cross Healthcare (New Zealand's largest health insurer) and refocused her activities.

After taking a couple of years off, Melissa Clark-Reynolds now invests in businesses and provides 'capable capital' - providing both investment and hands on entrepreneurial capability to turn the businesses around.
