More about Wally Lewis:

From the moment Lewis stepped out alongside Rugby League legends in State of Origin No: 1 back in 1980, a new era in Queensland self-esteem was born. The great man went on to become a legend virtually overnight, and earned such celebrated nicknames as "The King", "The Emperor of Lang Park" and even the most exalted - "The High Priest of the Spectacular."

He was a member of the 1977 Australian Schoolboys rugby union team, where his team-mates included the Ella brothers (Mark, Glen and Garry), future dual international Michael O'Connor and future Wallabies Michael Hawker, Chris Roche and Tony Melrose.

His first grade career kicked off with Valleys in 1978, when he scored three tries on debut as an 18 year-old. He went on to make 301 first grade appearances with five clubs - Valleys (135), Wynnum-Manly (76), Wakefield Trinity (10), Broncos (46) and Seagulls (34). And in a career spanning 15 years, he never once played reserve grade.

Although the re-birth of Queensland Rugby League supremacy came with the ingenious introduction of State of Origin football, the feats of Lewis were no doubt the catalyst. Until he retired from the Origin arena at the end of the 1990 series, the King had missed only two matches - both through injury. He captained the Maroons from 1981 to 1991 and won 19 of the 31 matches in which he played, and from 1992 till 1994 he was the Queensland Origin team coach.

Such a dominant figure was he in Origin, he won eight man-of-the-match awards - a record still standing - twice as many as any other player in State of Origin history.

As a player Lewis, totally dominated the scene and chants of "Wally, Wally" at Lang Park on State of Origin night became legendary. Since his retirement a bronze statue has been erected in his honour at Lang Park, and the Queensland player of the series now wins the Wally Lewis Medal.

On the International scene, his dominance was just as monumental. In 1986 Wally Lewis became only the second Queenslander to captain a Kangaroo Touring side to Great Britain and France, and only an injury in 1990 robbed him of breaking a string of records in the game. Lewis played in 33 tests for his country between 1981 and 1991. From 1984 he captained Australia 23 times, and in 1986 became only the second captain to lead the Kangaroos on an undefeated Ashes Tour. Wally has the unique honour of being a member of three undefeated Australian touring teams to Britain.

Wally was honoured as a Member of the Order of Australia (AM) in 1987 for his service to rugby league football.

At the 2002 Dally M Awards, Wally was one of six players inducted into the inaugural members of the Australian Rugby League Hall of Fame. Lewis, who for 12 years tormented NSW State of Origin teams and wore an unofficial crown as King of Queensland, took his place alongside others dubbed "immortals" of the game, such as Clive Churchill, Reg Gasnier, Johnny Raper, Bobby Fulton and Graeme Langlands.

Since retiring, Wally Lewis has been a News/Sports presenter with the Nine Network (QLD), and a sports anchor at prime time with the 6 O'clock Nine News. He has been a regular Rugby League announcer with Fox and a panel member on FOX Sports NRL Rugby League Show.

Wally Lewis' biography, Out of the Shadows, was published in 2009. Out of the Shadows is Wally's startlingly candid account of his life since his retirement from rugby league - from the darkest days of depression and debilitating seizures to his hard-fought recovery and triumphant return to the nation's TV screens.
