Affectionately known as Fuzzy, Faustina Agolley is a TV host, TV producer, music journalist, writer and DJ. As a host on Australia's top-rating entertainment program, The Voice, she bridged the gap between television viewers and online as the program's social media reporter.

Prior to The Voice, Faustina hosted Australia's flagship music program, Video Hits, for five years. She travelled the world interviewing the music industry's biggest stars including Alicia Keys, Kanye West, Adele, Gotye, Bruno Mars, Rihanna, Dave Grohl and Pharrell Williams. As DJ Fuzzy, Faustina loves a party and will leave no genre unturned in the process. She has played genre mash-up five-hour sets for Armani Exchange on Vogue's Fashion Night Out and The Voice Wrap Party, 90s hip hop at Carlton Dry and Nova FM's opening ski weekend in Falls Creek, and electro pop at Sydney's Mercedes Benz Fashion Week and Melbourne Fashion Festival. She's played club gigs across Australia and drops regular party mixes for Nova FM's Weekend shows. Her biggest crowd to date has been 7,000 at Brisbane's Riverstage.

Faustina has two university degrees: Media and Communications, Geography and Social Sciences at The University of Melbourne and RMIT University. As an ambassador for the Australian Literacy and Numeracy Foundation, Faustina's philanthropic work aims to close the Indigenous literacy gap.

Faustina Agolley divides her time between Australia, Los Angeles and London where she's growing her work as a host/interviewer, creator and producer in television and online.
